Sexual & Gender Identity

BIGENDER
Someone who identifies as having two gender identities.

INTERGENDER
Used to describe individuals who may feel midway between male and female.

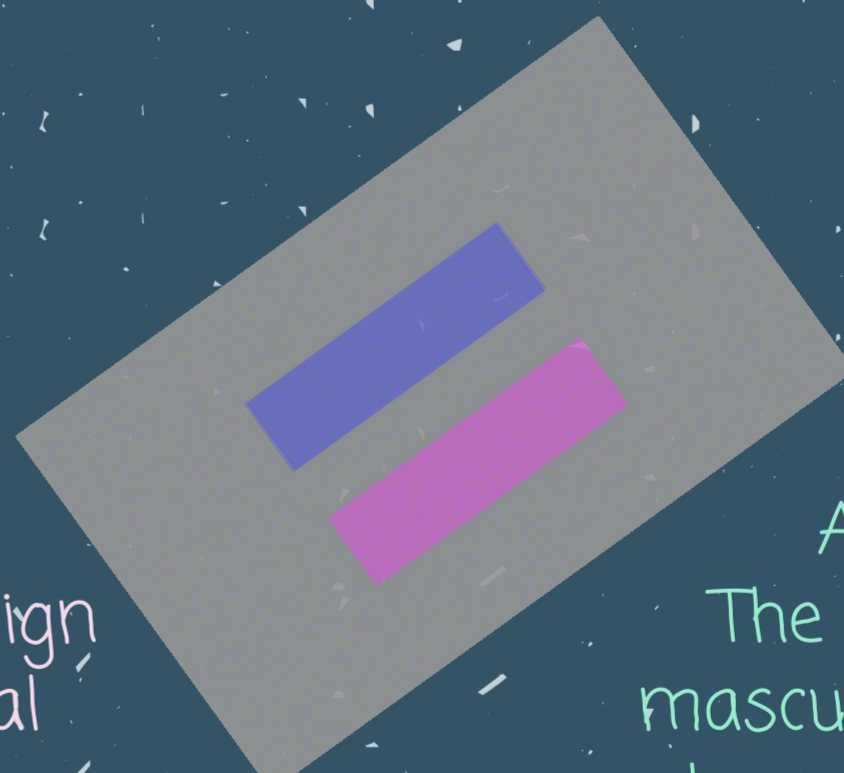

TRIGENDER
Someone who identifies as trigender may identify as two or more genders at a time. Trigender falls under the general category of genderqueer or androgyny, a gender that goes beyond the normal binary gender system and tends to be a catch-all place for other gender identities.

PANGENDER
A non-binary gender defined as being more than one gender. A pangender person may consider themselves a member of all genders.

GENDERQUEER
To exist in a way that may not align with heterosexual or homosexual norms. Someone who identifies as genderqueer may fall outside of, or fall in between, or fluctuate among the binary gender categories of man and woman. People who identify as genderqueer often experience their gender as 'fluid', meaning it can shift and change at any given time. Genderqueer can also describe a position of questioning one's gender identity during a particular period of time or in an ongoing way.

ANDROGYNE
The combination of masculine and feminine characteristics. Usually used to describe individuals who have no specific gender. Gender ambiguity may also be related to fashion, gender identity, sexual identity and/or sexual lifestyle.
